Building change competency

You know how it is. A new process was introduced yesterday and over the next few weeks you're supposed to think about the new team structure. And next month you will all have to work with the new tool. Can you keep up?

The world is spinning faster and faster. One change follows on the heels of the next. This seems to have become part of life these days. So we can't escape the fact that we have to find constructive ways of dealing with change. This e-learning course will provide many valuable ideas for confidently keeping up with the changes around you. You will learn how to draw out the positive aspects of change and adjust your mindset in order to identify the personal growth opportunities in transformations.

Instead of reacting to external events, you will assume responsibility and begin to take a proactive approach. At the same time, you will develop an awareness of the constantly changing circumstances and potential challenges and get some ideas and tools to help you to face them with greater ease. From now on, you will shape changes in a self-determined, constructive and sustainable way.
